The urgency of now: How can CPD serve as a catalyst for change

Scott Weber & Rishi Desai, MD, MPH

Discussion questions:

- As medical educators what is our personal and social responsibility in addressing public health issues
- What is our organizational leverage in the market to make change – how loud is our collective voice

Respond in Chat Box

1. What are we doing well in COVID education?
2. What have been your number 1 major challenge to address the needs of clinicians during COVID-19?

Discussion questions:

- What are we doing well in COVID education and what is missing
- Are we thinking far enough ahead to address the downstream implications of the pandemic on our healthcare workers:
example- mental health

Discussion question:

- What is our responsibility regarding racial/ethnic disparities in healthcare delivery

Whiteboard Interaction

- How can we build consensus amongst health system leadership, clinicians, patients and educators to make necessary and sustainable change?

Discussion questions:

- What is our role in addressing burnout?
- Is more education the answer – in 2018 1700 providers delivered over 1m hours across 180k activities – burden contributing to the problem?
- Over 1/2 med students and residents report burnout – impact on care? How do address?
